

Khaiim the RapOet

Guidance through writer's block & stage fright, Hip-Hop infused curricula, & chart topping music with Dreamville's Mez, praised by NY Times, NPR, etc.

Over the past decade, Khaiim has successfully integrated positive Hip-Hop culture & performance with academic curricula. In fact, his work was praised by President Obama's White House, the NY Times, NPR, and others. Besides summiting the Hip-Hop charts with Dreamville's Mez, he's performed and lectured internationally, at colleges including Yale, as well as arts centers, high schools, and others who yearn to overcome writer's block, stage fright, and stale curricula, whether virtual or on-site!

"...an amazing, engaging program full of peace, joy and love for all our students, got everyone involved... but most of all, talked about integrity in the way our students could engage the world, and taught them to be respectful and love one another... it was vital the adults got to participate... We're 5th through 8th, but this could go from Kindergarten through college students..."

- Dr. Matt Fitzsimons, Head of School, Grace Academy, Board Member, CT Association of Independent Schools